

Personas : Real Estate Agency Management System

Era - Real Estate Agent (Vlorë Specialist)

Era, age 28, is a real estate agent at the agency in Vlorë, Albania. She was born and raised in Vlorë and comes from a well-known local family with deep roots in the neighborhood of Uji i Ftohtë. She studied Tourism and Hospitality Management at the University of Vlorë and worked in hospitality for three years before transitioning to real estate, where she has been for two years. She lives with her parents in their family home and is saving to buy her own apartment.

Era's strength lies in her deep local knowledge. She knows every street, every building's history, and often has personal connections to sellers through family networks. Her clients are often other locals—families from Vlorë, Tirana families buying summer homes, and Albanians from the diaspora returning to invest. She is warm, persistent, and known for her patience with first-time buyers.

Her biggest challenge is managing the informal nature of local deals. Much of her work happens through WhatsApp, phone calls, and word of mouth. She currently tracks everything in a mix of WhatsApp chats and a paper notebook, but often double-books viewings or forgets to follow up with sellers who are hesitant. She needs a system that centralizes client communication, sends her automatic reminders for follow-ups, and lets her quickly pull up property details when she's showing a home without fumbling through multiple apps.

Artan - Senior Real Estate Agent & Appraiser

Artan, age 52, is a senior agent and the agency's go-to expert for property valuations and commercial real estate. He was born in Gjirokastër and moved to Vlorë in 1998 after working as a civil engineer in the construction sector during Albania's post-communist building boom. He is married with three grown children and has been with the agency for over a decade, having built his reputation on accuracy and integrity.

Artan does not chase many clients; instead, clients come to him because they trust his judgment. He specializes in high-value residential villas along the Ionian coast and commercial spaces in the city center. He is methodical, prefers face-to-face meetings, and is suspicious of anything that feels like a shortcut. He still calculates property values using spreadsheets he built himself over the years.

His willingness to adopt a new system hinges on whether it respects his expertise. He does not need hand-holding, but he does need a way to store and retrieve property valuation records without digging through old files. He also wants to be able to flag properties that have been on the market too long so he can recommend price adjustments to sellers before they lose patience. A system that lets him attach detailed notes, photos, and valuation reports to each property and alert him when a listing has gone stale, would earn his respect.

Miranda - Office Manager & Client Relations Lead

Miranda, age 45, is the office manager and the first point of contact for everyone who walks into the agency. She was born in Fier and moved to Vlorë after marrying her husband, a local fisherman, over 20 years ago. She has worked at the agency for eight years, starting as a receptionist and gradually taking on responsibility for client intake, document preparation, and maintaining relationships with repeat clients. She has two teenage children and is known as the person who remembers everyone's name, their children's names, and exactly what they were looking for three years ago.

Miranda does not work on commission, but she takes immense pride in her role as the agency's "face." She handles walk-in clients, answers the main phone line, and prepares all the paperwork for signatures. She is organized but works primarily with physical files, stacks of printed contracts, and a shared calendar that agents often forget to update.

Her greatest frustration is disorganization. She often watches agents scramble to find a contract she prepared days earlier, or hears from a client who was promised a call back that never came. She wants a system that digitizes document storage so she never has to re-print contracts. She also wants a shared client calendar that agents actually use, so she can stop acting as a human scheduling assistant. If the system can also automatically log walk-in client inquiries and assign them to agents based on availability, she would consider it a miracle.

Elton - Property Seller (Local Business Owner)

Elton, age 41, is a property seller who owns a three-story building in the heart of Vlorë that he is trying to sell. He was born in Vlorë and runs a successful family-owned hardware store that his father started in the 1990s. He is married with two young children and is selling the building to consolidate his business into a single, larger commercial space. He is well-known in the local business community and expects to be treated with respect and transparency.

Elton has listed his property with the agency for four months and is growing impatient. He chose the agency because of its reputation, but he feels like he is constantly chasing his agent for updates. He has received two offers, but both fell through, and he is not sure why. He communicates mostly by phone and expects the agent to call him with updates, not the other way around.

His experience with the current system (or lack thereof) is one of frustration. He does not want to log into any software himself, but he needs to feel informed. He wants to receive a simple, regular update, perhaps a weekly summary that tells him how many viewings his property had, what feedback was given, and whether the asking price is still realistic. He also wants to know the moment an offer is submitted, so he is not left waiting for days. A system that automatically notifies him of activity and flags when a property has received no viewings for a set period would restore his confidence in the agency.
